ARJUN S¹

The Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code is often heralded as the most impactful piece of economic legislation to have come out of India ever since the Economic reforms of 1991. In this paper, shall aim to examine the actual practical manner in which the legislation deals with the balancing of interests of the different stakeholders of the legislation. In doing so it shall define the stakeholders of the legislation, expand on their particular interests and elaborate on the specific provisions of the IBC that allow for these interests to be balanced for the greater good of the Indian economy. It shall then conclude with a few critical remarks as to the shortcomings of the code along with predictions as to where it may develop in the future.
