

ABSTRACT

TRENDS AND DETERMINANTS OF FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENT IN INDIA: IMPACT OF THE POLICY IN THE INDIAN MARKET

 SANGEETA BASU

Foreign direct investment (FDI) is Associate in Nursing integral a part of an open and effective international financial set-up and a serious catalyst to development. Yet, the advantages of FDI don't accrue mechanically and equally across countries, sectors and native communities. National policies and therefore the international investment design matter for attracting FDI to a bigger range of developing countries and for reaping the total advantages of FDI for development. The challenges primarily addresses host countries ,which require to ascertain a clear , broad and effective sanctionative policy setting for investment and to create the human and institutional capacities to implement them.This paper analyses and elucidates the facts how With most FDI flows originating from OECD countries, developed countries will contribute to advancing this agenda. they will facilitate developing countries' access to international markets and technology, and guarantee policy coherence for development additional generally; encourage non-OECD countries to integrate more into rules-based international frameworks for investment; actively promote the OECD pointers for international Enterprises.