

ABSTRACT

ANALYSIS OF HUMAN TRAFFICKING AND ITS IMPACT ON SOCIETY

* SUMEDHA SAINATH

Over centuries, the world we live in has accepted the domination of the male gender over the others in the society. Human trafficking is a phenomenon that place globally and is ranked done of the highest profit yielding organized crimes that take place throughout the world, on an international level as well as well as the national level. This paper will briefly look into the historical perspective of human trafficking in the introduction and move on to speak about the social practices or main motivation for any individual to part take in such activities. After which, it will focus on a specifically India and some statistics regarding human trafficking. The paper will further move into legislations such as the IPC, Immoral Trafficking of Persons Act, that govern this aspect. Next, this paper will dive into the study of contributing factors encouraging such activities, and briefly study the different/potential characteristics of victims and offenders. Lastly, it will attempt to study various reasons such activities go unnoticed at times. The author in this paper tries to analyse the concept of human trafficking, various reasons and characteristics that incite such conduct, its impact on society and strives to shed light on these points so that measures may be taken to tackle the issue appropriately.

KEYWORDS: Human trafficking, impact, society, immoral, crime, human rights, organised crime