

ABSTRACT

ASIA'S WAY OF BEING A HOST: AN EXHAUSTIVE RESEARCH WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO INDIA AND ITS REFUGEE LAWS

*TAPATI DAVE<sup>1</sup>

Asia is the most populated continent in the world and its dynamic nature is a justification for the ever-changing demographics and relationship between the countries and therefore, the main aim of the research is to conduct basic understanding about the stand of Asia with regard to International Humanitarian Concern of one of the most prevalently insecure people known as Refugees and their Refugee Laws. The purpose of the article is to improvise the underlying reasons, benefits, disadvantages or advantages of not being a party to the 1951 Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees. The results are met through descriptive and deductive research methodology and a special reference of India and Indian Laws is made in order to make a demonstrative discussion. The research is aimed to cover the basic and general understanding of the whole Refugee Concept as well as targeting statistical data for recent available Refugee placements and forming an analytical approach in order to understand every aspect and know the positives and negatives about the decision of a country who is not a party to the convention.

Key Words: Refugee Laws, Asia, Population, Humanitarian, Convention, India, Indian Laws, Benefits, Disadvantages

---

<sup>1</sup> Designation: Undergraduate Law Student at GLS Law College, Ahmedabad